IN CALIFORNIA, hurting someone different is no big deal. Seriously.

Under California law, more than 20 clearly violent crimes are not classified as “violent” — including hate crimes.

While hate crimes are reaching record levels in California, offenders convicted of hurting someone based on race or gender are considered “non-violent,” making them eligible for early prison release — without their victims being warned.

Proposition 20 prohibits the early release of offenders convicted of hate crimes — because hate crimes are violent.

Stand against hate at keepcalsafe.org.