IN CALIFORNIA, hurting someone different is no big deal. Seriously.

Under California law, more than 20 clearly violent crimes are not classified as “violent”—including hate crimes.

While hate crimes are reaching record levels in California, offenders convicted of hurting someone based on race or gender are considered “non-violent,” making them eligible for early prison release—without their victims being warned.

Proposition 20 prohibits the early release of offenders convicted of hate crimes—because hate crimes are violent.

Stand against hate at keepcalsafe.org.